WELLESLEY, Mass. – The Davis Museum at Wellesley College is pleased to announce the acquisition of more than two hundred works on paper as a bequest from Wellesley College alumna Ann Kirk Warren '50. The quality, quantity, and breadth of this bequest add immeasurably to the Museum's strong collection of prints and drawings.

Ann Kirk Warren (1926-2016), an avid collector of works on paper, was a longtime supporter of arts institutions across the United States. Ann earned a bachelor's degree in English literature from Wellesley College and master's degrees in English literature and art history from Wayne State University. In addition to amassing a world-class collection of works on paper that spanned five centuries, she herself enjoyed painting and printmaking.

To celebrate Warren's generosity and her acumen for collecting, the Davis is highlighting this extraordinary addition to its collections through several rotations. The first rotation, The Fine Print: Selections from the Collection Bequest of Ann Kirk Warren '50, will feature the female subject across five centuries with prints ranging from 16th-century engravings by Hendrick Goltzius to 20th-century drypoints by Max Beckmann and Lovis Corinth. The Fine Print will be on view in the Robert and Claire Freedman Lober Viewing Alcove from February 10 through July 9, 2017.

"Although unusually modest, Ann Kirk Warren was a collector with impeccable taste and capacious interests," said Claire Whitner, Assistant Director of Curatorial Affairs and Senior Curator of Collections and exhibition curator. "Her gift includes an extraordinary variety of treasures—from European old masters to modern American artists—and reflects the evolution of printmaking. In assembling this first rotation, I wanted to capture the diversity and richness of Ann's collection and to honor her exceptional gift to the Davis Museum."

Nearly twenty works by eleven artists will be included in The Fine Print with techniques including engraving, lithography, etching, and drypoint. Highlights include prints from Wenceslaus Hollar's series, A Muff in Five Views, (1645-46); Édouard Manet's etching, The Infanta Margarita, after Velázquez, (ca. 1861); and Pablo Picasso's etching, Femme nue devant une statue (Nude in Front of a Statue), plate 6 from the Vollard Suite (ca. 1931).
